The traditional focus in organizing support services has been on finding ways of finding people with mental illness willing to work. But working with people who are committed to their recovery is also a therapeutic act, and the recovery model directs attention to the goal of enhancing social and role functioning. We suggest that support services can be defined as the services and supports available to help people reach their goal of functioning socially and in the workplace. We also suggest that psychosocial support is an appropriate response to people who are suicidal, and that the role of mental health professionals is to help users of support services avoid self-destructive behaviors.The Basic Principles Of plastic surgery The Basic Principles Of plastic surgery * If your a U.S. accredited doctor and would like further particulars on compliance with Medicare Prescription Drug strategy steps, look for further details on the Medicare website.
