What's new in Cybershift:

(roller coaster) Monolith is a Bolliger & Mabillard launched steel roller coaster at Kings Island in Mason, Ohio, United States. Located at Kings Island's Backyard, it is themed to the Star Wars franchise. It is the second of two roller coasters designed by Bolliger & Mabillard, the first being Ripsaw at Kings Dominion. History Construction The roller coaster officially opened on April 21, 2010, after passing riders on its first launch. The ride was co-designed by Bolliger & Mabillard and ride designers Greg Stolzenburg, Matt Marino and Kevin Wood. Each train design features two single row cars with no up or down-seat switchability, connected to a chain, and load bearing steel frame. The trains are made by German manufacturer Schroth. The trains operate at high speeds (up to 120 km/h), and a magnetic brake force on one side of the train forces it to an emergency stop. The first rider to reach the lift hill summit is given a "first-person" view. In a common element, spectators at a certain height can see the riders who are on the outside of the lift hill loading area, and another section can be seen looking up at the loading and unloading station. The team often claims the first car is closer to the station, but its impossible to tell which car is closer because the view is out of the sightline of each other. The ride's pedestal was built by Otis Elevator Company. The ride was fabricated by WED Enterprises. The visual effects are designed by Gregory Harrison's Thunder Roadshow, Inc. Theme The ride is themed to the Star Wars franchise. It is the second of two roller coasters designed by Bolliger & Mabillard, the first being Ripsaw at Kings Dominion. The ride is themed to the Star Wars missile base on Geonosis. Attraction details Ride experience The
