*Broadcasting* has been a fascinating field and one which has proven to be of a great challenge to the television and radio media. On April 29th and 30th, I will be joining a few friends at The Alamo Drafthouse in Houston to discuss all sorts of exciting things. I wish to apologize for any lateness of this post. I have been off for the holidays. I have some great news - our future broadcasting plans are off to a great start. We have partnered with Houston's own Improvolution Festival to produce a live taping of a podcast of our group. In addition to Improvolution, we will also be able to produce an audio broadcast of our group's night of late. In true Captain Obvious fashion, I have had a very fulfilling journey in broadcasting as my career, but it is time to take it to the next level. We will be producing audio versions of our podcast in conjunction with the physical audience of all the attendees. The success of this will help us establish what we can do in the future. A few weeks ago, I approached Jason Youngblood, head of content for Improvolution, about our podcast and he was very receptive. Of course, there are many other things we can do in this podcast, but I would like to keep the focus on my early radio career. I have a few more minutes of my life to "spare" and we can discuss our group a bit more before I move on. At times, I have been a bit disorganized in the past. I am going to show you how much I have learned in the past three months, but there will be a few bumps. I will be going through a few different podcasts and playing one of each. The first podcast I will be playing is from my early days as an amateur radio ham. I am sure you all know the term "Ham Radio". I really wish I had "Ham Radio" knowledge before starting this journey, but it is something I am hoping to learn along the way. In my early days, I was required to have a licence and to be able to operate a Morse key. I had a microphone. I had a station. I was actually able to communicate with the outside world from my backyard. Now, the irony is that I do not have a ham radio licence anymore

I need to create a new column with unique values for the names I have tried for the last 2 hours and am trying some basic, but cannot figure it out. Any help would be appreciated. A: Either use dplyr's as.character: `df %>% mutate(factor_col = as.character(factor(factor_col)))` or use tibble: `df %>% mutate(factor_col = as.character(factor(factor_col)))` Friday, April 15, 2016 Starting to work on my new cosplay line, my newest design is the character Lobelheim from the board game Draught and Dragons. I've been working for the past 2 years on designing Lobelheim for the game and now that I'm starting to work on clothes I have the time to put into the armor design. I'm going to start posting some soon and I will also have some more pictures from the shoot done in the next two weeks.

Prevalence and determinants of disability in a rural population in southern India. To examine the prevalence and determinants of functional disability in a population-based sample of 1,113 rural South Indians older than 15 years. A prevalence-based sample of 1742 rural South Indians was selected from two villages of rural Andhra Pradesh in South India. Participants were clinically examined by well-trained physicians for the presence of vision, hearing, and neurological impairments; the presence of major depression, and all chronic illness conditions and functional disability. Sampling rates were 89%, 67%, 88%, 95%, 99% and 97%, respectively. Overall, 20.7% were functionally disabled. The most disabling conditions were Major Depression (23.5%), visual impairment (6.7%), dementia (6.4%), and stroke (5.1%). Disability was independently associated with Major Depression (OR=2.02; 95% CI 1.66-2.47), visual impairment (OR=1.69; 95% CI 1.59-2.17).
