The Channel is the part of the English Channel of France that separates England and the mainland of France. It is an artificial waterway that was conceived and built during the Roman Empire, and was fully completed in the late 1300s, originally serving as a port for merchant ships and fishermen. Although the majority of its area is within English territory, much of the French side is also the site of resorts and casinos, attracting tourists and high-rolling gamblers from Europe. The south side of the Channel consists of the Isle of Wight, which can be reached from Portsmouth and the south coast of England. The West Kent area includes Lydd, which can be reached from Rochester. The south coast of England is dotted with its seaports, including Folkstone, Dover and Newhaven. The towns of Rochester and Gillingham lie on the east coast of Kent, with the smaller town of Sittingbourne in between. The city of Canterbury is on the other side of the coast, in southeast England, as is the town of Faversham. The northern shore of the English Channel is made up of Dover and a number of small resort towns. The port of Dover is the sole passenger port on the channel. It is connected by ferry services with France and Belgium. The Dover harbour complex includes the sea front. Dover town is the centre of the Dover urban area and the principal port for Dover Castle. Dover Castle is at the south east corner of the harbour, which also houses the war memorial. Dover Harbour features a tidal harbour and covered dry dock. At the end of the promenade is Dover's sea fort, which faces across the Strait of Dover towards the French coast and comprises a ring of fortifications. Towards the west end of the promenade is Dover's Royal Palace and the Overseas Terminal building, which features shops and restaurants. Eastward, the harbour's most striking features are the twin artillery gun emplacements on White Cliffs of Dover. They were used to cover the invasion beaches during World War II. To the south is the coast road to Folkestone and

Hythe. Directly behind the cliffs are Dover's round houses, which were used to shelter heavy guns. These buildings are now derelict, but the foundations can be viewed. Also here are the remains of the Gun battery at Shoreham Castle. The ruins of the tower of the late 18th century Chain Home radar station can also be seen. The town of Folkestone is the location of Folkestone Harbour, Folkestone and Dover railway station,

2014-08-05 00:04:18Harrods cake a dead ringer for Tiger BeastRaf/ngpr33/Green Christmas - The Screaming Tiger - Brad Caraway vs Tadasuke is a very refreshing match because Caraway is a scrappy little bastard and smiles when he's getting manhandled, Tadasuke is kinda stranky which means he can't play much offense in the first 2 minutes, thanks to Tadasuke's big body and Caraway's lack of speed. So here we have a one-sided slugfest with Caraway getting matched up against Tadasuke, Caraway starts working his booty side and gives us a little knock and shove action from time to time but we soon get a little back and forth before Tadasuke works out a crossbody. A little more back and forth action then we get some kind of body scissors before Caraway nails a necro boye, small but solid shot there. Caraway takes over with an arm dr and a couple of punches, Tadasuke shoots a flying crossbody but caraway sprawls it and looks to get up. As he gets up Tadasuke back body suplexes him face first then goes straight for the arm. That's when Caraway nails him. One thing that needs to be reported is how bloody Caraway is at the end of this one. Caraway nails Tadasuke in the head and then hits a ring cutter. He then proceeds to whack Tadasuke in the noggin then followed with a ring cutter of his own.c.c.c. /sc How We Do at Harrods | MP092 Tiger Soldier? MP09052014-07-10 13:52:56After defeating Barry

Hardy & Wayne McAllister in a special dark comedy match, Tiger Sam (Barry Hardy) has a chat with his pal Matt Morgan, whilst Matt is a bit upset about his injury (although to be fair he does look better with his arm in a sling) and talks about how he wants Tiger Sam to help him out, by beating up Barry Hardy & Wayne McAllister in a tag match later in the evening as a reprisal for his injury. Barry Hardy says he knows where he can take it. Matt Morgan says he wants revenge on Barry Hardy for injuring him earlier on. They lock horns in their argument.c.c.c. /sc How We Do at Harrods | MP0905 VACANTS
