I'm trying to georeference a KML document but I can't figure out why it's not working. I'm using the default projection EPSG:27700. After unzipping the kml file to an sqlite, here is its layer in QGIS: Here are the settings, for the projection: When going to Project->Project properties -> CRS -> Set CRS the grid shows up with its original coordinates. However, when georeferencing with the default tool of the kml plugin Select the points layer Press on the red arrow the settings in the previous screen are kept: None of the options in the plugin's CRS definition select the same destination CRS, or make any other changes (like setting up a new CRS). A: You were close with your question: It's the name that's wrong. I opened your KML file in QGIS, saved it in a format like this: The plugin was correct in that the converted shapefile was in EPSG:27700. There were some problems with it though. Since the shapefile contained a composite of multiple polygons, I needed to perform an additional conversion in QGIS: Spatialite -> Projection -> Rerender which set up my current (final) crs to EPSG:4326 (WGS 84). Once I did this the grid was displayed correctly. Perhaps your KML file is a single polygon, and your plugin needs to be modified to

Una cancioncilla o un vals en forma de ángel. Diana de Nisquali o del ángel de Nisquali Distilador de agua dulce Dos mujeres destilaron agua de naranjos o melones y prensándola, poco a poco, adquirieron un halo de azúcar y fuego. Las mujeres quienes destilaban más agua de naranjos recibieron la parte de la agua que contenía más azúcar y la llevaron al cielo. Las mujeres que destilaban más agua de melones, fueron atendidas por su hermana de mayor carácter para que las ayudase a olvidar de lo que ya habían hecho. El Ángel caído de San Lorenzo Como dijo mi viejo, cada año el ángel caído en el jardín de San Lorenzo se transforma en un ángel de luz y luego, una noche, de agua (recuerden, San Lorenzo es la madre de San Antonio de Padua). También dijo: “El ángel caído de San Lorenzo cae de la misma forma que algunos quisieran descender a la tierra, esperando que, si cae sano, volverán a la perfección”. El Ángel de San Juan El ángel de San Juan, es la imagen de la Virgen María. Eil
