To assess whether live postoperative clinical and objective measures of competence are different after one-domain (C) versus two-domain (C+V) ciliary training. Patients undergoing cataract surgery for post-traumatic cataract were randomly assigned (1:1) to either ciliary training with a one-domain approach (C) or with a two-domain approach (C+V). Postoperative outcomes were measured at immediate post-op (Intraoperative) and on first post-op day (Postoperative, 1) to determine the impact of domain on outcomes. Thirty-nine subjects were included (C n=20; C+V n=19). Postoperative outcomes were scored by an independent observer.
