i have a mid-2011 mac that runs high sierra. it works fine and i have no reason to upgrade anytime soon. adobes new photoshop requires a newer os but i can rent their unsupported older version (ver. 21.2.4) on cc. im thinking, it makes more sense to buy a used software package rather than pay rent to adobe. i am not buying it for the support. i just want a photoshop and illustrator package that is compatible with my os system. does that make sense it is not safe for anyone to use after this post. this is only available to me only, you can not buy it, you cannot redeem it for anything, you can't share it with anyone else, it contains all my passwords that i have, it does not contain the adobe.com account so it wont work as a trojan, it does not contain scripts like the ones in the youtube video. it is 100% tested with legitimate keys. the site i can no longer get adobe & acrobat to re-direct to it makes me wonder what it is about being a paying customer that they feel they should be able to treat us so poorly. whether you're an insider with a well known company, or a legitimate customer, you can be legally assured of receiving a product that is not only 100% tested, but 100% working! i bought cs6, they said i need acrobat 9 or above, i said i need acrobat 8 or above, they said i need to download a patch. i asked if they were pirates and they said no. the license agreement said in 3 places i was still under their protection. i said i don't need protection after the patch then, they said i can't. i said i can't download anything. she replied that they had to install something, but didn't tell me what. they sent me a mail that said they had to install something, and they sent it using the license agreement. so she said i was under their protection
